How does your environment influence who you are and what you become?

1.) What one physical location most represents you and your life (is it a school; is it your room; is it your living room; is it a playground; is it a kitchen)?

2.) What elements of your environment hold positive memories?

3.) What elements of your environment hold negative memories?

4.) What elements are of your creation (What elements did you create)?

5.) What elements are created by someone else?

6.) What details in your environment influenced who you are?

7.) Based on your answers to the questions above, choose at least 3 elements to design the set (backdrop) for your life's story. Use colored construction paper, scissors, glue, tape, and magazine images to help visualize what this setting looks like.

8.) Share your set designs with the class and discuss:

- Who are the people that live in this environment?
- What do you see in the set design that gives you an idea about the people, who live in this environment?
